FOREWORD

Not so many years ago I headed the Historical Records Survey (1935-39) which gave prime emphasis to the Inventory of County Archives, chiefly because the program distributed work opportunities to the greater number. When, however, the State Records Microfilm Project was proposed by the University of North Carolina to the Library of Congress, the seed fell on well-harrowed soil. Over the years, through too many vicissitudes the Project has been brought near completion. Here, in sub-publication form on a scale never before attempted is 160,000 feet of film or the equivalent of about 2,500,000 pages or 8,333 three-hundred page volumes assembled under one title. Gaps there are sure to be and our attention will be devoted to filling those gaps. Errors will certainly be noted, and we will welcome learning of them. By and large, however, we consider this Records of the States, a milestone in the democratic process of making the materials, recording the workings of a democratic society, available to all who would learn how we came to be what we are as a people.

PREFACE

The State Records Microfilm Project was launched in 1941 as a joint enterprise of the Library of Congress and the University of North Carolina. As originally conceived and prosecuted, the scope of the Project was limited to locating and reproducing the legislative proceedings of the American Colonies, Territories, and States. Interrupted for several years by the war, when work was resumed in 1946, coverage was expanded to include, in addition, statutory laws, constitutional records, administrative records, executive records, court records, some local records (county and city), records of American Indian Nations, records of rudimentary states and courts, and, inevitably, a group only describable as ⁶³ "Miscellany."

Field work involved expeditions to each of the forty eight states, more than 60,000 miles of travel, and the exposure of 160,000 feet of film. The result integrates and preserves approximately 2,500,000 pages of widely scattered State Papers on 1600 reels. Unrolled, they would extend for a distance of over thirty miles, but they may be stored in less than twenty-seven cubic feet of shelf space, roughly the equivalent of eight small book cases. Actually, the entire collection might have been transported to Washington in the trunk of the small coupe which was used throughout the undertaking as a conveyance for photographic equipment.

The program has been divided into three successive operations. It was, of course, necessary first to locate and copy the appropriate documents in whatever form they might survive--in print or manuscript separately produced or buried deep in the files of crumbling newspapers. The successful attainment of that objective has been made possible only by the unstinted cooperation of hundreds of agencies of state and local governments through the officers who administer them, as well as by many private collections throughout the country who, convinced of the public service implicit in their participation, have most generously permitted the filming of unique items in their possession.

The second operation has consisted of the organization of the collection. To that end a relatively simple system of classification has been developed and that system has governed the collation of material. The reels have been divided, first by State, then by Class, and then chronologically thereunder.

Within each State collection, documents have been compiled in accordance with the eleven chapters in the classification. As a consequence of this arrangement the microfilms may be reproduced either by jurisdictions, or by regions, or (broadly defined) by subject matter. This organization presents a further advantage by facilitating the intercalation of additional documents whenever they are discovered. For the preparation of an inventory and the formulation of the expansive order of arrangement or classification the Project was fortunate in securing the expert services of Miss Adelaide R. Hasse who was persuaded for a time to emerge from well-earned retirement and to assume that important portion of the task. Her outstanding competence in this field has strengthened confidence in the maximum utility of the resource.

The third operation has been the preparation of a Guide to the Records of the States, under the immediate editorial supervision of Lillian A. Hamrick. Miss Hamrick has had not only to establish a satisfactory format but also to penetrate the mass of bibliographical detail and thereafter to devise the method which seemed most effectively to assure the exploitability of the resource. That she has accomplished this labor in a minimum of time does credit to her imagination, experience and zeal.

The Guide has been designed to serve a dual purpose: (1) to supply the user with information as to the location of the original of each of the documents and its location on the reels and (2) to provide a catalog from which orders for the reproduction of portions of the collection may be submitted and filled. At the same time it should be understood that although the Guide attempts an authoritative listing of discovered sources, it makes no pretense to be, in fact, a repertory of definitive State bibliographies. It is rather a reservoir from which hereafter definitive bibliographies may be drawn. For that purpose it assigns a repository symbol for the location of the original of each document facsimiled on the film and a classification symbol indicating the nature of material under each unit of a reel. Thus the Guide contributes to the mechanization of bibliographical registers.

Materials which are known to exist but which (for whatever reason) had not yet been procured on film at the time of the preparation of the Guide are recorded in the Guide as [W] items. Many of these have since been obtained and corrections have been noted in the errata section. The Guide may be revised from time to time as additions to the collection impose that requirement.

Meanwhile the State Records Microfilms constitute a unique compendium of primary source materials for research. For size, organization, and potential usefulness it is perhaps unparalleled. The story of America, American institutions and the conditions, progress, and privileges of American life are in it. To the students of America it is dedicated.

INTRODUCTION

CLASS A. LEGISLATIVE RECORDS. Class A contains the records of the lawmaking division of state government as it has operated under the traditional principle of a threefold separation of powers. The records of the legislative department reveal the origin and development of the principle of representative government in America and its crystallization into the "Republican Form" of government. This class is subdivided into seven parts: Part 1, Journals, Minutes and Proceedings; Part 2, Legislative Debates; Part 3, Proceedings of Extraordinary Bodies; Part 4, Committee Reports; Part 5, Hearings and Investigations; Part 6, Legislative Papers; and Part X, Miscellany.

Part 1 presents the proceedings session by session of the legislative assemblies of the American colonies, territories and states. The plan has been to copy the complete file of journals, beginning in each state with the earliest record extant, down to a terminal date varying from state to state. This date is governed by the scarcity of these journals in the research libraries of the country and also by the value of legislative proceedings at a particular period. The plan provides for terminal extensions at a later date if it seems feasible. The printed editions of the journals have been microfilmed when they could be found. Manuscript copies have been used for the period previous to the printed records or to fill in gaps when there was no provision for printing. If the original manuscript copy has disappeared, an attempt has been made to reconstruct the proceedings from secondary or semiofficial accounts published in newspapers.

This microfacsimile condensation of the legislative records of the states is the result of a nation-wide search which has continued for more than fifteen years. It has been supplemented for the colonial period from records available only in the British Public Record Office. Piecing together a series from such varied sources has required precise work which has proceeded with the same care and exactness needed in constructing the statutory law in Class B.

Part 1 of Class A is a significant segment of the microfilms as it is the foundation on which Records of the States has been built. Since its beginning in 1941 it has afforded an opportunity to demonstrate the feasibility of a comprehensive program of itinerant microphotography. Its success in collecting one group of source materials suggested the desirability of an expanded program in allied fields. The problems of procedure encountered and solved during this pioneer stage served well in the later phases of the work.

Legislative journals form the core of the microfilm collection. They make up by far the largest of any of the series and contain the most generally useful group of source materials in any of the classes. Historically the legislative journals might be considered the most valuable of any of the published series of public documents because for so long they were general carriers of various types of documents. The appendix to the journal continued as a medium for official publication by all agencies of government until the advent of the Collected Public Documents series; therefore today it is an important documents source book for that period.

Part 2, Legislative Debates includes the verbatim record of legislative deliberations in states which have printed their debates in form comparable to the Congressional Record. For the most part these have been occasional publications of particular sessions of legislatures, or have continued serially for a short period of time. In Pennsylvania and Maine, however, the series has continued over a long period and is currently published today.

Part 3 includes the proceedings of extraordinary bodies that have at times exercised legislative powers but which were not regularly constituted legislatures. The Provincial Congresses which acted as legislative bodies during the transition from colony to state are examples. Some of them served as constitutional conventions in framing the first state constitutions and their proceedings, therefore, were both legislative and constitutional in character. If the records of these functions cannot be separated, they will be placed on a composite reel or series of reels bearing the joint symbol A.3 and C.2 with cross references under the unit numbers to indicate their location. The records of Provincial Councils and Committees of Safety, which exercised both legislative and executive functions, will be arranged as convenience dictates under A.3 or E.4 with cross references.

Part 4, Committee Reports and Part 5, Hearings and Investigations, offer categories for placing groups of legislative documents separately printed but not issued in a regular series. For the most part such documents will be found in the appendices to the journals or under Class D, Part 1, Collected Public Documents.

Part 6, Legislative Papers includes various types of sessional papers in unpublished form which were deposited in file boxes in the legislative archives. No systematic attempt has been made to copy these in a comprehensive way. A method of selection has been followed, but Part 6 offers a large field for later supplementation of Class A.

Part X provides a catch-all for miscellaneous legislative materials that do not fit into one of the regular categories.

Location symbols in the table of contents serve two purposes. They give credit to holdings which have contributed materials to be copied for the collection and they indicate rarity of items. By far the largest number of legislative journals making up Part 1 were microfilmed in the Library of Congress. The Library of the University of North Carolina, the Massachusetts State Library, the New York Public Library and the New York State Library, in that order, furnished the next largest numbers. State Departments of Archives and the archives of the Secretaries of State furnished most of the manuscript journals. The State Library and historical societies in most cases furnished runs for rare periods. The lacunae and unica for this series have been gathered from a great variety of public and private libraries more than for any other group in the collection.

Under Part 1, journals of upper houses will bear the reel symbol A.1a, journals of lower houses will bear the symbol A.1b and journals of unicameral bodies, A.1c. When journals of both houses in a series of sessions of a bicameral legislature are published in single volumes, or when for convenience they are arranged on the films sessionally in juxtaposition, the reel symbol will bear A.1a:b. In cases in which both journals for a single session are bound together interrupting a regular "a" or "b" series, the volume will be placed under either A.1a or A.1b and the fact will be indicated under the unit number and be cross references in the table of contents. Organically the Governor and Council of the Colonial Period represented a functional union of the executive, legislative and judicial authority. When the records of these functions are interspersed through the same journal they will be located as convenience dictates and a combination reel symbol E.1 and A.1a, and/or F.1 will be used with cross references in the tables of contents.

The Check-List of Legislative Journals published in 1938 by the National Association of State Libraries served as a guide in the location of journals and was an invaluable aid in planning the initial work. The Supplement Check List, published in 1941, was the result of additional findings made by the project.

CLASS B. STATUTORY LAW. Class B constructs the body of statutory law, as it has been enacted in each of the states, into a number of companion series arranged in chronological sequence. The class is subdivided into four parts: Part 1, Codes and Compilations; Part 2, Session Laws; Part 3, Special Laws; and Part X, Miscellany.

Part 1 consists of the compiled and codified law of the states and includes abstracts, abridgments of the law, collections of laws in special fields, codes, compilations, revisions and digests. This part groups the classics of American statute law. The first of these to be adopted in each colony and territory formed the core and the base support for the future build up of enactment in the state. Later ones reveal the results of reform in the basic system of law in particular jurisdictions and show the status of enactment in its breadth as of a certain time. These masterpieces in the summation and statement of the law reflect the contributions of great legal scholars and their influence on the development of the American system of law.

Part 2 contains the sessional laws enacted from the beginning by the legislatures of each of the states. The original session laws contain much basic information, not carried forward in the periodic revisions of the body of law, which retains present value for the lawmaker engaged in the formulation of new legislation. Development trends in any subject division of the law may be traced historically state by state through the series of session laws and comparative studies may be made of the progress of legal reform at any given time throughout the states.

Part 3 contains many types of specialized legislation separately printed and issued collaterally with the regular sessional volumes. Series of special laws provide a rich source for specialists studying institutional development and social and administrative reforms in the law.

Part X provides a catch-all for miscellaneous statutory materials that do not fit into one of the regular categories.

Class B is a closely unified segment of the microfilm collection. The purpose in its arrangement has been to prepare a statutory source book generally useful to the largest possible number of libraries and institutions engaged in legal research. The plan followed, therefore, has been to select a terminal date for each state on the basis of the unavailability of the laws of the state in law libraries generally, and then to microfilm the entire series from the earliest copy found down to the terminal date rather than to copy as fill-in material only exceptionally rare periods of various series. The aim has been to construct on microfilm complete series of volumes of laws, state by state, with perfect text volume by volume of each series. This has required painstaking piecing together of materials copied at widely separated holdings over the nation in order to fill in missing pages and eliminate imperfections in volumes so that the entire body of statutory law might be presented for research use complete and perfect. Manuscript copies of the laws have been filmed when found, in order to reconstruct the record when printed copies could not be located. The materials of which Class B is formed lend themselves readily to a systematic arrangement, but the precision work necessary in preparing the reels with the textual exactness required in legal publication has been time consuming.

Location symbols in the table of contents serve two purposes. They give credit to holdings which have contributed materials to be copied for the collection and they indicate rarity of items. Symbols sometimes have not been indicated for late periods where the materials could have been copied in any one of a number of libraries. Because of the convenience and economy in time, the greatest part of the materials forming Class B was furnished by the Law Library of the Library of Congress, which holds the nation's largest single collection of statutory laws. Secondly, the Harvard Law School, the Charlemagne Tower Collection of colonial laws in the Historical Society of Pennsylvania and the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, in that order, have contributed the largest number of individual items to Class B. Each state law library has generally supplied missing volumes to complete the file of its particular state, and a great number of collections throughout the country have furnished rare items needed to fill gaps in various series. For the colonial period the British Public Record Office has furnished a large complement of laws in manuscript for a number of the original colonies.

Following Part 2 in the symbol, in states where two or more companion series of session laws were published concurrently for a period of years, lower case "a" will indicate Public or General Laws, lower case "b" Private, Local or Special Laws, and lower case "c" Resolves. Following Part 3 lower case letters will also be assigned to the various types of special legislation.

The Check-List of Session Laws and the Check-List of Statutes... published by the National Association of State Libraries have been the basic guides used in assembling Class B.

CLASS C. CONSTITUTIONAL RECORDS. Class C relates to the exercise of the constituent power of the states. In the aggregate, these records sum up the basic principles that have controlled the development of the fundamental law of the nation. These records describe the behavior of constitutional conventions, the agents through which the political sovereign from time to time acts in making the body of law which is basic in the structure of government and which shapes the contours of authority of its established organs.

Part 1 includes patents, grants, charters and constitutions - landmark expressions of the fundamental law. These have been the builders' frames basic to the structure and form of government and have served as guaranty reservoirs for repose of the liberties of the people. Historically they mark the constitutional revolution of America from authority granted downward in concessions of Colonial charters of privileges to the spring of popular sovereignty with reservation of liberty in the Bill of Rights.

Part 2 includes journals of the proceedings of constitutional conventions, and Part 3, constitutional convention debates. Part 4, constitutional convention papers, contains various file papers and committee drafts sometimes preserved but seldom published. The constitutional convention is the primary assembly of representatives of the people where sovereignty, the constitution making power infinitely divisible in its make-up, is channeled into a unity of action - the great contribution of America to the science of the body politic.

Part 5 includes the proceedings and reports of constitutional commissions and councils of censors, occasional bodies doing the spade work for constitutional revision. Part X provides a catch-all for miscellaneous materials that do not fit into one of the regular parts.

Location symbols show that first, the Library of Congress and second, the New York Public Library furnished the largest number of printed materials making up Class C and that the remainder was contributed widely by holders throughout the states. This class contains a substantial body of unpublished material and a number of journals of little known conventions. These should form an additional source of considerable importance to the constitutional historian as the Constitution of America becomes fully annotated. Due to the limited amount of material contained in Class C for each of the states as compared with the other regular classes, it will be feasible, in most cases, to arrange all of the parts for a state on a composite reel. The reel symbol, therefore, will contain only "C," the reel number and its inclusive dates. The materials will be grouped on the reel chronologically.

In Class C the regular scheme of placing part symbols with the units or entries has been altered. Instead there are captions in the tables of contents for each constitutional convention with its inclusive dates, and under these captions, without differentiating part symbols, the various parts of Class C are arranged in numerical order.

Official Publications Relating to American State Constitutional Conventions published by the University of Chicago Libraries has been the principal guide in compiling Class C.

CLASS D. ADMINISTRATIVE RECORDS. Class D includes records of the administrative departments in state governments. The clear-cut functional division existing between the executive, legislative and judicial branches of government does not differentiate the activities of the administrative offices. In addition to records of strictly administrative agencies this classification includes publications issuing from the executive and legislative divisions which contribute to the hybrid nature of this grouping of reports. Class D is subdivided into four parts: Part 1, Collected Public Documents; Part 2, Reports and Papers of Permanent Agencies; Part 3, Publications and Papers of Temporary Agencies; and Part X, Miscellany.

Part 1 contains varied types of executive, administrative and legislative documents as they were collected and issued in bound serial form by the states. One main category of these documents includes the messages of the executives and gathers up the annual or biennial reports of administrative officers, departments, boards, commissions, institutions, etc. The other consists of committee reports, hearings, resolutions and miscellaneous papers submitted during a session which the legislatures order to have printed. In state government Collected Public Documents are the counterpart of the Serial Set issued by Congress. They embody some of the most valuable and varied sources of material available for research in government and politics. This set has the greatest volume of any of the series in the collection although some states never issued a collected document series and other states discontinued their publication after a short period. In many cases important documents not obtainable in any other form are included in Collected Public Documents.

The origin and development of Collected Public Documents as a published series in the states is important. From the earliest colonial times the regular message of the governor was the occasion for transmitting to the assembly documents that had accumulated in the executive office, along with various kinds of reports. The clerk collected these and added them at the end of the journal volume. As the administrative structure of the states expanded, the number of separately reporting agencies multiplied and the appendices became quite bulky. In time it was necessary to print the appendix as a separate volume. In the 1830's the states began to issue a regular series of documents printed separately from the journals. Each of the states has published such a series for varying periods except Arizona, Delaware, Georgia, Idaho and Oklahoma.

Due to the great volume of materials contained in Collected Public Documents, it has not been feasible, so far, to extend the microfilm program to a comprehensive coverage of the field. The work has been limited to supplementing the large document depositories of the country. This resulted in copying the early periods and in filling gaps when the copies are now rare items. Terminal supplements can be added as a broader objective and may appear desirable later.

Part 1 has been arranged with less precision than the other printed series. This has been due to the fact that the materials do not lend themselves to exactness of arrangement. It is difficult to check these collections for omissions because of the variations in format and irregularities in document numbering and in pagination. In many cases the only integrity of a volume of Collected Public Documents is a loose binding thrown around a group of unnumbered reports.

From time to time states have issued companion series of collected documents. In such cases Executive Documents will be indicated by D.11 and Legislative Documents by D.12. When a companion series was printed for each house of the legislature, Senate Documents will be indicated by D.12a and House Documents by D.12b.

Location symbols in the tables of contents show that the Library of Congress, the Massachusetts State Library, the Library of the University of North Carolina and the New York State Library, in that order, furnished most of Part 1 and that a number of State Libraries contributed for particular states. Collected Public Documents--A Check List was published by the National Association of State Libraries and prepared in conjunction with this work.

Part 2 includes the same type of material as Part 1. The plan has been to reconstruct from the ephemeral issues of many separate agencies a collected documents series for a period prior to the actual binding of the material in collected form. The purpose is to arrange the sets of reports and papers of each agency on individual reels. In cases of certain long established agencies, materials will be sufficient in volume to warrant their arrangement on individual reels. In such cases, separate classification numbers are assigned to the reports of each agency: D.21, Governor's messages and proclamations; D.22, Auditor; D.23, Comptroller; and D.24, Treasurer. In order to present the record of the fiscal officers prior to the time of printed reports, original reports in manuscript and ledger account books have been copied. The reports of all other departments, boards, institutions and commissions are grouped under D.25 with lower case letters to designate each type of agency, e.g., D.25i for Internal Improvements as the arrangement outline will indicate. When the reports and papers of an agency are not sufficient in volume to warrant their arrangement on an individual reel, the materials of a number of such agencies may be consolidated on a reel or reels having the identification symbol D.2. In such cases, the classification for each agency will appear under the unit number, or with each individual entry if the materials of more than one agency are given under a single unit. Although D.2 is confined generally to administrative records, materials logically belonging to Class X or Part X of any of the classes may be included in order that miscellaneous ephemeral material may not become fugitive within the collection. Whenever the consolidated materials of D.2 for an inclusive period require more than a single reel, such reels will be numbered "1a," "1b," etc.

Part 3 will include a grouping of the publications and papers of temporary agencies when the volume of material is sufficient to organize a reel; otherwise Part 3 may be combined with Part 2. Part X provides a catch-all for miscellaneous materials that do not fit into one of the three parts. Materials contained in Parts 2 and 3 were furnished for each state principally by the State Library and a number of university libraries. The Library of Congress and the New York Public Library contributed the largest number of items for all states. The Bancroft Collection at the University of California and the Coe Collection at Yale contributed most for the western states. The American Imprints Inventories have been valuable aids in locating materials for Part 2 and Part 3.

CLASS E. EXECUTIVE RECORDS. Class E contains records of the executive department of government as it has been organized under the traditional principle of a three-fold separation of powers. The class is subdivided into five parts: Part 1, Executive Department Journals; Part 2, Governor's Letterbooks and Papers; Part 3, Secretary's Journals and Papers; Part 4, Proceedings of Extraordinary Executive Bodies; and Part X, Miscellany. The division into parts is based on a distribution of the executive function among the various officers and bodies that have carried on the work of the department from time to time.

Part 1 contains the journals that have recorded the day by day exercise of the executive authority. These were kept in the form of large manuscript ledgers and in only a few cases have they been printed at a later time. In the colonial period they took the form of a record of the Governor and Council sitting in an executive capacity and contain a breadth of information due to the general advisory and limiting capacity of the Council. Organically the Governor and Council of the colonial period represented a fusion of the functions of the executive, legislative and judicial powers. Usually the record of these different functions was segregated in separate journals. In some cases, however, the union of functions is demonstrated by the interspersing of records of the executive, the legislative and, even at times, the judicial functions on pages of the same ledger. Such cases offer a practical problem in the classed arrangement scheme and necessitate a combination reel symbol E.1 and A.1a, and/or F.1. In some cases during the transition period from colony to state this body continued as a Provincial Council.

In most of the states after independence the Council lost its significance as an integral part of the executive organ and became a perfunctory body. In accord with the Revolutionary distrust of the colonial Governor, the framework of government provided in the first state constitutions placed a predominance of authority on the legislature by conferring much of the traditional executive power upon that organ. Gradually, a balance of power was attained and an independent executive department with a responsible head freed from legislative control evolved.

In some of the New England states, however, a virile Council was carried over into statehood and continued to play an important role as an organ of administration as that fourth function of government began to develop and expand. Likewise, during the first stage of the government of the western territories, before provision was made for an elective legislative assembly, a union of legislative, judicial and executive powers was vested in an appointive Governor and Judges. Their journals also show that certain administrative duties were conferred upon and exercised by them.

Part 1 of Class E affords a series where the records of all of the incidents of the executive authority were kept in a general ledger. Part 1a segregates in the same journal the Governor's official messages to the legislature wherein he regularly surveyed conditions in the state and made proposals for reform. As a matter of convenience, in many cases the printed series of messages will be included under Part 1a, but in other cases these will be grouped under Class D along with reports of administrative agencies. Part 1b segregates in a single journal or in a printed series the Governor's proclamations. Part 1c carries a record of the Governor's appointments and commissions. Part 1x includes miscellaneous functions of the executive office such as pardons, requistions, etc., and cases in which a number of functions are combined in the same record book. E.1x also includes records in the form of miscellaneous papers of the executive department.

Part 2 of Class E includes the Governor's official letterbooks and his miscellaneous correspondence and papers when such correspondence was kept in a separate series rather than in a general executive journal. When there are a series of transcribed letterbooks and a series of loose or mounted papers, the identification symbol for the first will bear lower case "a" after Part 2 and the second lower case "b."

Part 3 contains the records of the Secretary of the colony, territory or state such as journals or miscellaneous papers in book form. If both series are found in the same jurisdiction, lower case "a" following the part number will designate the first and lower case "b" the second. Originally, the Secretary's functions were primarily executive as he was closely associated with the Governor and often acted for him in his absence. As time passed, however, many of his duties became administrative and eventually a separate department of state developed.

Part 4 includes the proceedings and reports of extraordinary bodies which have exercised executive authority on occasions such as Interim Committees of the Revolutionary period or Boards of War created for emergency purposes.

Part X provides a catch-all for miscellaneous executive records that do not fit into one of the regular categories.

Materials forming Class E consist almost entirely of manuscript records and the technique of their arrangement has been mainly archival. Location symbols in the table of contents show that Class E has been furnished largely by the official archive departments of the states and from the holdings of a number of historical societies. Individual items, however, have been contributed by various libraries and private collections.

CLASS F. COURT RECORDS. Class F consists of the records of the judicial branch of the state governments. The court records were the last of the groups to be added to the expanding program of the project. It is the least complete of the six regular classes and therefore offers the largest opportunity for future supplements.

At this time the records of the courts of the colonial period of North Carolina and the Supreme Courts of many of the western territories have been microfilmed. Plans have been made to copy a large body of records of the courts of colonial Maryland and it is hoped in the course of time that similar programs can be arranged on a comprehensive scale in other states. The archives of the courts, almost entirely in unpublished form, are a valuable source of legal and historical material. In some cases they are the only existing archives where executive and legislative records have been destroyed by fire or flood or through the negligence of custodians.

Because of the incompleteness of this collection it is difficult to plan the expansion of Class F into exact subdivisions. It seems advisable, therefore, to prepare a tentative Arrangement Outline which will be subject to readjustment as the work progresses. As more is learned about the varied functions of the court systems and their organization at different periods and in different jurisdictions, it will be possible to classify the records and assign them to particular categories.

Part 1 consists of the records of appellate courts; Part 2 contains the records of courts of general original jurisdiction. Part 3 includes the records of Admiralty Courts and Part 4 consists of the records of Chancery Courts - courts operating under peculiar forms of judicial procedure and applying specialized bodies of substantive law. Part 5 includes the records of various courts of specialized jurisdiction. Part X provides a catch-all for judicial materials of a miscellaneous nature, such as charges to grand juries, court rules of procedure and legal forms, and treatises on court organization and functions.

Within each of the five regular parts of Class F the materials may be separated uniformly into three sections: Court Minutes, Court Dockets and miscellaneous File Papers relating to the cases. When these three types of records are grouped on the same reel or when they appear in sequence on consecutively numbered reels, the reel symbol contains the part number only. The section number designating the type of records, e.g., F.12, F.13 or F.14, etc., appears below the unit number in the table of contents. When two or more parts are so arranged on one or more composite reels, the symbol bears only the class letter F. The part number appears below the unit number; the section number is indicated to the left of the individual entry.

Location symbols in the table of contents show that Class F has been furnished largely by the archives of the courts, but some of the records have been contributed by the official state archives departments and a few have come from other sources.

Terminal extensions made to the parts of any of the classes in the future will continue the regular order of numbering the reels of the series involved. A collateral series added will be indicated in the identification symbol following the part number by lower case "s"; reels preliminary to the present beginning dates of a series will be indicated by lower case "p." When both preliminary and collateral materials are arranged on the same reel, the identification symbol will contain lower case "p:s." In cases in which the additions will fill gaps at present intervening within a series of consecutively numbered reels, lower case "a," "b," etc. will follow the reel number so that the material may be placed in its proper chronological progression.

When duplicate records or materials of a similar kind are allocated to the same numbered part and appear on consecutively numbered reels within overlapping periods of years, "1," "2," etc. will follow the reel numbers in order to show date progression. In states where there are two or more companion series of records running concurrently over the same period of years in any of the parts, the materials will be arranged on separate series of reels and lower case "a," "b," etc. will be assigned to the part number.

Principles of logic cannot be followed strictly in grouping certain types of materials on some of the reels due to practical factors involved in their physical assembly. Economy and facility in printing, cataloging, shelving and marketing the reels and use of the material by students dictate a hundred feet as the practical length of a standardized reel of microfilm. The retention of association of materials within their proper holding collections, the identification of their original issuing authority, and the inclusion and preservation of stray items and hybrid materials present additional problems in making up individual reels. These considerations have required a continuing readjustment of the arrangement scheme to meet new situations and to allow for contingencies arising in future preparation of reels. Notes and cross references in the tables of contents are being used as aids in locating and correlating materials which may logically appear to be displaced from a normal order. These are carried forward in the Guide. In time a general index of the collection will provide a more adequate finding tool.

The materials on the film can be identified with contributors by checking their symbols against the list of holders in the Guide. The make up of the holders' symbols follows, with one exception, the plan used by Location Symbols for Libraries in the United States, published by the Historical Records Survey. In order to differentiate between library and archive holdings, the regular letters of the symbol are followed by - Ar, i.e. Nc-Ar for North Carolina Department of Archives and History. In addition to the many libraries and archives that have given access to microfilm their holdings, others have furnished microcopy of their materials. Thus the Public Record Office contributed a significant complement in microfacsimile from the British public records to fill an hiatus in the account of our colonial origins which had existed in American archives. The New York Public Library, Harvard University and the Henry E. Huntington Library have supplied large orders of microfilm and many others occasional orders of microfilm and photostatic copies during the last nine months after field trips were discontinued. In this way it has been possible to obtain many splices needed to remove [W]s and complete reels. Of great assistance during recent months, also, has been the cooperation of a number of libraries in making loans of their holdings so that the microfilming could be done in the photoduplication laboratory. The Massachusetts State Library, the New York State Library, the Pennsylvania State Library and Duke University in that order have sent the largest shipments, and many other libraries and individuals have sent occasional items that were needed.

William J. Kimmel, photographer of the initial Legislative Journals Microfilm Project, through his initiative and resourcefulness, contributed greatly toward the working out of a system of extensive microcopy collecting. He has continued to serve the project as liaison in coordinating the editorial phase of the work with those phases done in the laboratory. James C. Hiatt served as photographic assistant during the summer and fall of 1946 on the long field trip to the West Coast. Benjamin R. Wilkinson in like capacity made the trip to New England in July and August of 1947. Peter F. Long assisted with the work from September 1947 until September 1948 making the long trip through the Midwest and Southwest, back through the South, up the Atlantic Seaboard, and later through the Middle Atlantic States, New England and across the Old Northwest as far as Dakota. Wallace C. Wade served as photographer on a number of short make-up trips during the last year of the project. Much credit for the productive success of the field work is due to the devotion, energy, endurance and efficiency with which these companions of the road performed their tasks. Lena H. Slevin microfilmed most of the material copies in the laboratory and Alice Rami microfilmed and attached the leaders and trailers to the completed reels.

William R. Pullen has been an operations manager for the workshop and has effected a smooth coordination with phases of the work done in the laboratory. He has made a definite contribution in working out methods of procedure and in maintaining a close control over the various phases of operations. Pauline E. Pullen has worked most closely with the director throughout the entire assembly and editorial phases of the project. She has supervised various stages of the work from that of preparation of materials for microfilming, proofreading of the exposed film, through physical assembly of make-up reels to the preparation of tables of contents for the reel leaders. Her contribution has been in the development of techniques of assembling and splicing together make-up reels and working out the forms and filling in data in the tables of contents. Her intimate attention to detail has resulted in both accuracy and excellence of the work that she has done. She has gathered information and descriptive data from the record books of the project and checked this against the film itself in order to prepare the tables of contents for the leaders and then channel it on for use in the preparation of the Guide. Mrs. Pullen assembled and arranged the materials on the film and prepared the tables of contents for Class B and Class C, and the latter class was completed almost entirely during the director's absence. Mr. Pullen performed a similar job for Classes E and F, and the two collaborated on Class A. Class D was prepared by the director.

Mr. C. H. McDougall drew the reel symbols which are the identification exposures at the beginning of the leaders. Miss Betty Anne Siegfried typed the material for the Guide. During the past eighteen months, additional personnel has served the project, and the director expresses his gratitude for the assistance of each.

CLASS L. LOCAL GOVERNMENT RECORDS. Class L, the first of the five special classes, is divided into two parts: Part 1, City Records, and Part 2, County Records. Here, as in the case of Court Records, the coverage is limited at the present time and merely suggests the possibilities and values of a comprehensive exposure of the records of local units of government. Since the city and the county were the historical springs of population in the settlement of the country, their archives contain many of the organic roots which were transplanted and grew elsewhere in the constitution of government as the nation expanded. Local archives in some cases contain the soil through which the seed of organic growth stemmed as local units expanded into a state unit of government.

CLASS M. RECORDS OF AMERICAN INDIAN NATIONS. Class M includes Part 1, Records of the "Five Civilized Tribes," and Part 2, Records of Indian Relations with the Colonies and States.

Part 1 delineates the international records of the constituted governments of Indians through their treaties, conventions and councils; it is divided, by function, into the records of the operation of the governments of the Cherokee, the Chickasaw, the Choctaw, the Creek (or Muskogee) and the Seminole. These records are the best example in

Anglo-American history of the adaptation of our constitutional and legal system by the native and reflect the influence of the body of Anglo-American law on the development of native institutions. Indeed, their pattern of executive, legislative, judicial and administrative structure of government was a copy of those of the states. The efficiency with which it operated, as indicated by the systematic records they kept, suggests a distinctive contribution and a lesson in the science of government.

Part 2 contains the record of the official relations of our governments with the Indian tribes over the span of American history as conflicts arose over land, commerce and authority and as their treks and peregrinations embroiled them in our westward movement.

CLASS N. NEWSPAPERS. Class N affords a place in the scheme of arrangement for a source that is the only extant carrier of certain official records. A close alliance of the newspaper collation is made with the regular and special classed series of documents so that by cross reference these exclusive records may be correlated.

CLASS R. RUDIMENTARY STATES AND COURTS. Class R includes Part 1, Rudimentary States, and Part 2, Rudimentary Courts, and collects the records of those organized bodies that have possessed at sometime during American history the rudiments of operating governments. Part 1 presents a myriad of forms, sometimes abortive in attempt, sometimes pre-organic in life--here revolutionary in design, and there rival in status --usually extra legal in origin but always transitory in existence, e.g., forming a "Mayflower Compact," a bill of rights, or a constitution of government. Collectively, these phantom governments moving through the past have been expressions of the political genius of the American people for self-government when removed beyond the pale of constituted authority.

Part 2 centers on the mining districts throughout the West, in which organized groups of miners legislated in primary "Town Meeting" fashion and established courts for the administration of civil and criminal justice. The records of these bodies reveal the need for the protective controls of government by individuals in the wilderness. Their codes of laws and regulations constitute an indigenous contribution to the American system of law.

CLASS X. MISCELLANY. Class X is designed as a miscellany to hold various types of materials many of which overflow from the other classes. It makes provision for additional materials issued under authority of the states and for non-official material about the states. It includes census reports of the states, many of which antedate the Federal census. These are valuable for studies of population movements and the settlement of the frontier. It also contains the records of the corporate land companies and the proprietaries, offshoots of the early English trading companies and bodies exercising quasi-political powers, which played an important part in the settlement of certain regions of the country. Much of this will show the points of impact of foreign races and languages on our system of government and the coalescence of their ethnic and cultural influences in the rise of American civilization. Here may be mapped out a study of the Nation's ethnography. The Miscellany will also include a category of early Americana, rare book imprints gathered from widely scattered sources. And finally, broadsides will be isolated within the Miscellany. The broadside and the broadsheet, precursors of the newspaper, were the earliest carriers of official information and continued to be a principal form of official publication through the period of colonial printing. In them is revealed a wealth of colonial history relating to the many political currents that swept into the formation of the Union.

It does not appear feasible at this time to arrange and present as independent classes the material assigned to the special classes. Additional collecting in the field and further bibliographical research will be necessary before these less regular records can be prepared in an orderly and definitive manner as integrated classes. During the course of preparation of the regular classes, however, adjustments of the arrangement scheme have permitted the salvage of many special materials that otherwise would have remained for a time in a state of repose unavailable for use. These materials have been tied into various reels of the regular classes with their classification identity being preserved by unit or entry symbols. Class D.2 has been used to serve as a general carrier of miscellaneous items and Class D.25 as a carrier of series of records of special bodies. For example, the records of land companies and the proprietaries, quasi-governmental bodies, were lifted entirely from Class X and placed under D.25 1a. In the meantime Class X will continue to cumulate miscellaneous records and serve as a reservoir from which additional material may be lifted from time to time and assigned to a regular class. Already a new regular class is indicated - Class G, Intergovernmental Records. This class would include records of the colonial attempts at confederation and union, commercial agreements, Indian treaties, boundary disputes, etc., and would carry over into interstate compacts and relationships under the constitution.

The addendum section of the microfilms is in the nature of a heterogeneous supplement to the first edition of the six regular classes. It is composed of two groups of materials. The first will include new materials that are not entered in the Guide under any of the regular classes; the second will consist of [W] entries in the Guide which have been copied and added to the collection too late to be spliced into the original reel. The addendum will be arranged into separate reels alphabetically by states and within each state alphabetically by classes and numerically by parts to the extent that the materials are sufficient to constitute a reel of reasonable length. Thus a single reel may combine materials of all parts of a class or of all classes for a single state in order to make up a single reel. Where the composite reel includes a number of classes, A is used as a generic symbol. The make-up of the reel symbols will follow the regular scheme. Where the addendum materials of a state are insufficient to form a single composite reel, a number of states will be grouped in the same order on the same reel. These reels will consist of individual [W] entries, splices for missing pages and short length new materials. The reel symbol will be Ad, the reel number and the states included on the reel, i.e. Ala.-Nev. At later times a group of lacunae may be arranged into supplementary reels, as Ads.

KEY TO LOCATION SYMBOLS

In order to secure perfect copies of some items on the microfilm, it has been necessary to film parts of two copies from different locations. The joint holders are indicated by a dash between the symbols, i.e., MHL - DLC.

Unique items are indicated by a -1 following the symbol for the holders, i.e., MHL-1.
